Summer Opportunities and Experiences Throughout the World

The Lord has provided an exhaustive amount of bless ings from my summer experience in Jordan. Since my parents work as medical missionaries in Jordan, I was able to return home, live with my family, and revive my Arabic from the dusty corners of my brain. The Lord allowed me to make new friends, as well as learn more about the medical field through my daily routine.

My summer day was filled with work in the hospital with the Arab people. I was able to attend various medical needs, and do other tasks such as paint, attend patient gospel meetings, and learn Arabic. One of the highlights of my day was to get together and play with the children who were admitted to the hospital. I was also able to visit with the women patients, who occupied a lot of my time. As they taught me Arabic, I taught them English. By this, we broke the culture barrier, and become close friends. They brought much laughter and joy to my summer.

The most interesting challenge this summer was communicating with the people. The language barrier between Arabic and English was quite large, and often I could not talk to the people or even understand what they were saying. In spite of the barriers, the people of Jordan were still some of the most friendly, hospitable people I have ever met. It did not matter that I could not speak with them, they treated me as a honored guest of their country. I am blessed to know the people of Jordan, and when I think of them I am reminded of their friendly hearts and simple joys.

Freshmen Orientaion,
An Adventure
In Itself

Orientation week, it was the best of times, it was the worst of times. There was nothing to get out of bed for, but there was everything to wake up for. The choices in the great hall were plenty, yet there was nothing to eat. There arose a man, a young college student, the first soul to greet me upon my arrival. His warmth and energy could not have been matched by any. Many more faces flooded by after his. The friendly and funny face of my RA from First Belz, my three new roommates, and my lovely small group leader. The continuous outpouring of assistance from many faces that surrounded me made the week more than bearable.

It was a short two years ago when I experienced Freshmen Orientation week, and this year I was able to sit back and watch all of the fun events take place. I can vividly remember how I had to eat with grumbled when I or go to yet another test. I found myself actually missing the events that surround the week this year. I longed to go and play all the get to know ya games, I actually wanted to go to the gathering the last night when you all walk down to the overlook, and sing before the student body. Freshmen Orientation week is a long week, with lots of things to accomplish, but hopefully most of us do have found memories of it.

Still And Quiet Before Him

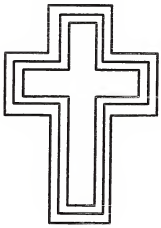
There is a day starred on my calendar every semester that is not often found on many other college calendars and that is Day of Prayer. No classes are held, no offices are open. This is a day set aside specifically for prayer. It is a gift from a college that aims to hold Christ pre-eminent to students who need a time to stop the business of college life and re-focus; it is to be spent however the individual chooses.

Many halls take advantage of a chance to get together; there are numerous memories made during camp-outs, hikes, and picnics where halls grow closer to God and to each other. Spending part of the day alone with God is also a special time for many individuals to be still and quiet before Him. Throughout the day, students can be found in solitude, outdoors, writing in journals, or playing guitars. Though there are no required activities on Day of Prayer, many groups organize things such as Bible readings, praise, worship, testimony, sharing, and of course prayer times.



One tradition that is sure to happen every Day of Prayer is Psi Chi's sunrise prayer time at Rock City. Vans carry those willing to rise early over to Rock City to pray; it is still dark when heads bow and eyes close, but when the "Amen" is voiced, eyes open to catch the beauty of the sunrise. Also, the tradition of the tower watch lives on: this is a 24-hour period in which there is always someone praying in the Carter Hall Tower. Barring all weather conditions- rain, snow, or shine, the day goes on and many people end their Day of Prayer with a renewed spirit and thankful heart.

Killer '97 Hula Mauka:

The Not-So-Explicit Tropical Expletive

I'm picturing reading through my yearbook many years down the road and coming across all the sorts of yearbook articles that are always so typical. Do we have to be objective when writing about events that turn up in the yearbook? This is about Kilter by the way, Kilter 1997. Hula Mauka. What exactly is that anyway? Hula is a kind of dance. And Mauka? Is that some sort of outfit maybe? A grass skirt and coconut bikini top? Or maybe one of the other fine outfits we had represented. There were mismatched tropical prints, black socks and sandals, Polynesian natives (brown finger-paint pro- vided the tan), Gilligan's Island characters, and a fine assort- ment of other random island/ tropics gear. All of us Cov- enant students are going to make a great bunch of tourists later on.

But I'm thinking that maybe Mauka had something to do with the food. Hula for the dancing be- cause of the fine live band that we had, and Mauka for the tropical cuisine that we got to munch on. There was a roasted pig, and other island treats like baked beans and lemonade (we are so darn cultural!). Not to mention our decorations. Little umbrellas like the kind in frozen drinks (alcohol free, of course) and crepe paper palm trees everywhere. Ahhh...it was all so grand!

One final thought on this Hula Mauka thing though, and I think that this is probably the best explanation. It's a tropical expression for surprise or pleasure. Like how much fun we had after a rousing limbo match (hula mauka!). But for me, it was just seeing my stunning date, the best of all...HULA MAUKA!

Battle Of The Halls

Skit night preparations may begin as much as one week or as little as one hour before their performance. Skits include music, dancing, impersonations and dramatizations.

Carter Picture Night was held in the Great Hall with a wide range of vignettes. Fifth North took third place honors with their collage of music and lip sync. "What would OSHA do?" was the theme for second place winners Third South. They took a spin-off of the infamous blood-borne pathogens video required of all Practical Work students. First place went to Ghetto with their parody of an aerobics class getting ready for intramurals. Joey Redd turned red in the face everytime he tried to get his students attention as the aerobics instructor.

Founders Skit Night was dangerous and entertaining. Third place went to Balcony who did an impersonation of chapel announcements including those dealing with singles, married couples, and lobby couples. Blackwatch's top ten list of games that are not fun to play with only three people won them second place. First place went to First Belz who performed a rendition of the fiasco held at Sunday meals in the Great Hall.

The skit nights gave the halls a chance to do something as a group and to entertain the audience.

Covenant Students Involved In Local Churches

Involvement in a local church has put into practice the things I am learning here at Covenant and has allowed me the opportunity to give back to the local community. It is part of our responsibility as believers to be part of a church family for accountability, spiritual growth, worship and service, be it youth ministry to high school students, inner city children, or widow's ministry.

I believe it is also important for us to reach out in the community with a spirit of service, we all should take advantage of what the city has to offer us and we should be active in giving back. Upon completing a Youth Ministry practicum assignment I was shocked to learn that I spend anywhere from ten to twelve hours a week performing my job as a youth director at Red Bank Presbyterian Church.

It has indeed been a privilege to work for my home church here in Chattanooga for the past year. Filled with valleys and peaks, youth ministry is a teaching and rewarding experience. God is good. All the time.

So, What Did You Do River Break 1997 for Fall Break?

Perhaps the ideal fall break does not necessarily involve the associate dean of students and a professor in the backwoods of Alabama, but though Riverbreak was not necessarily ideal, it did exceed our expectations. Before we knew what we had gotten ourselves into, we were informed that our adventure was not just a break, but an experiment in education. Riverbreak was indeed a break from everyday life. We laughed, ate, and relaxed by the fire all week, but we also discovered a better way to learn.

In another time zone, state, and culture (yet still on Lookout Mountain), is Mentone, Alabama- the setting of Riverbreak. We loaded our stuff and ourselves into the van and headed toward a cabin in the woods. Eleven of us slept under one sagging roof, sharing our lives and talents. Our biggest excuse for getting together was to consider Christianity and Southern fiction. To do this, we discussed The Christ-Haunted Landscape: Faith and Doubt in Southern Fiction, by Susan Ketchin. We learned how "education and community work in tandem," as Barb put it. The mind-set of service dominated the week, as shown by chores and encouraging words. Also, we were free from the usual cliques (although, ironically, we are one now), classes and stresses, so we were free to be ourselves and comfortable with each other. This atmosphere of community, service, and freedom, allowed us to learn in a whole new way.

Of course Riverbreak wouldn't be Riverbreak without a river. On Sunday afternoon, after a hike to the bottom of the gorge, we got to know the Little River very well. A few other attractions and distractions included the Mentone's Colorfest, visits from some Covenant folk, hymn singing, nightly dance parties, discussions of Iowa, poetry and prose readings, and general revelation. As we learned with and from each other through discussions, service and community, we learned that the classroom is not the only place for education.

Homecoming 1997
Burning at the Stage
Welcome Home!

This year's homecoming was the largest yet at Covenant, with nearly 560 alumni in attendance. The weekend of October 24-25 was filled with events for both students and alumni. Friday evening marked the return of "Burning at the Stage," a growing homecoming tradition. Last year, the class presidents wanted to do something for the students on homecoming weekend and the result was "Burning at the Stage". Take Spotlight Cafe, move it to the Highlands soccer field and add a bonfire. The event was a howling success, resulting in this year's class presidents collaboration to carry on the tradition. This time around "Burning at the Stage" was expanded to become a festival. Although rain forced the event to be moved to the Great Hall, it was not seriously hampered. Booths lined the perimeter of the Great Hall serving up snacks, cotton candy, coffee, and root beer floats. The juniors sponsored a pottery booth, which allowed the sculpting of masterpieces. The moon walk provided the touch of a county fair and was well received by all. Of course, "Burning at the Stage" would not be complete without the "stage". Six different groups performed throughout the evening, displaying a vast array of talents and musical styles. The highlight was definitely a rare appearance by Scott Anderson, "The Dancing Machine", as he accompanied Andrew Hobbs, Isaac Wardell, Rich Keesee, and Dave Kauffman in their rendition of U2's "Discotheque". Other events of the weekend included the Multicultural Extravaganza, the cross-country invitational, both men's and women's soccer games, and the return of the Homecoming Parade. Overall, the weekend was enjoyable for both students and alumni, as they celebrated yet another year of God's faithfulness to Covenant College.

An All Saint Soul Party

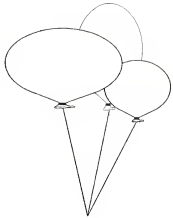
The Long and Winding story of The All Souls, All Saints, All Styles, All Sorts Party at Covenant College on October 31, 1997.

There was much excitement that day in anticipation of the party that night. We had classes and wanted to just get them over with and have a good time. When the time drew near, Founders Third Lobby (home to many famous events), was once again transformed into a madd party zone with all types of nuttystyle decorations that had a good time. The DJ came and began to set up the sound system and blast some tunes. Since there was dancing allowed, some people began to test their groovularity and moved to the mucic, before the party started!! It was fairly exciting.



When it was time for the party to begin, it began. There were many people and monsters and wierdos there and they spooked us out. The DJ started to get all wacked out and began to spin the CD's and alter the mental state of the crowd. They were transported to a zone of existence where music rules and everybody has a good time.

The Crowd floated through time as the music transported us from the 70's to the 80's and 90's. We rocked to U2, Dave Matthews, Michael Jackson, House of Pain, Kirk Franklin and the Family and his grandmother and great uncle and second cousin twice removed and God's Property, Vanilla Ice, the Beastie Boys, LL Cool J, R.E.M., Bob Marley, and all types of other styles. The DJ was bombarded and harassed and treated like a robotic computeroid at times, but he had a good time too. The crowd danced and had food and drink. There was a contest for the best costume, bobbing for apples and a pin the horse or statement to the Wittenberg Door. All in all, Covenant College, the party place it is, was madd wicked funkadelic nuttyhogstyle!

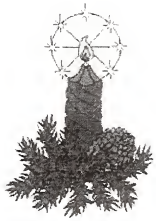
Madrigals
A Magical Tradition
1997

Christmas time in our family, as in many families, is full of tradition. One of those traditions is coming to the Madrigal Dinner. I remember the excitement that my parents shared as they returned to their alma mater for this festive occasion. I have been able to share in that excitement many times in my life as well.

This tradition in my family began back in 1969, when my mother was part of the Madrigal Singers. That year, what used to be a simple affair featuring the singers in a post-dinner songfest, suddenly became quite an elaborate social event. Things like candlelight, soloists, a junior choir, a narrator, and even the boar's head, played their part in making an elegant occasion. They served a steak dinner, which was said to be "special." By 1971, it was beginning to take it's shape as it now had a king and queen in costume, and a jester. Throughout the 70's and 80's, the Madrigal Dinner evolved into what we know it to be: full costumes, full concert, full narrative, and all the trimmings.



My parents began going to the dinner again in 1982, and my first experience was when I was twelve in 1989. Since 1982, members of my family have attended all except three dinners. It has become quite a tradition that we love to share with each other and other friends and family.

The "evolution" of the Madrigal Dinner continues. The production is now done three nights, and is full of Christmas music, both traditional and refreshingly unfamiliar, from the Madrigal Singers, a brass choir, and a Renaissance ensemble that was new to this year's dinner. The viands are overwhelming, as they serve a full five-course meal with everything from wassail to flaming plum pudding. It is a night full of merriment and joy as we celebrate the birth of our LORD. In my family, it is the commencement of the Christmas holiday, and truly a grand and magical tradition.

~ Erin Farquhar

Campus Activity Board
Fun on Campus
Fall Semester

CAB managed another eventful year as it brought some unique activities to Covenant 's campus as well as some historic favorites. We began the year in line with tradition as Kilter lit up the Great Hall. "Hula Mauka", a Hawaiian phrase literally translated into "dancing in the mountains", provided an appropriate theme as hula dancers cluttered the dance floor and tacky tourists challenged the limbo stick. In another attempt to keep tradition, the Covenant community was given opportunities to snuggle-up under the stars for drive-in movie favorites (popcorn and soda provided an extra romantic twist). We followed last year's concert theme by bringing in various bands and solo artists; Dave Wilcox and Harrod and Funck were returning favorites in the fall semester as well as newcomers, Considering Lilly. Their mellow folk-style and poetic lyrics provided the musical motif until a Trinidadian steel drum band swept through the Great Hall sending shock waves through campus and leaving no one in their seats. To top the fall semester off, Saturday afternoons were filled with paintball tournaments in Covenant's new facility. These tournaments were full of ruthless, in your face, paint-splattering excitement! Once again CAB came through with several fun ways to enjoy campus life.

Guildencrantz And Rosenstern Are Who?

I was having trouble paying attention. It was chapel at the beginning of the year and we were in the midst of what seemed like fifty announcements as various clubs and student projects vied for our commitment. There had been several fairly interesting clubs mentioned so far, but none had grabbed my attention to the point that I was willing to commit to it that very instant. Then Nancy Young stepped up to the microphone. By the time she got out her first sentence, I was already sold.

"This fall, the Covenant Drama Club will be doing a production of Tom Stoppard's Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead..."

I sat bolt upright in my chair, barely catching enough of the rest of the announcement to find out when tryouts would be. I had to be a part of that production! Aside from Hamlet itself (upon which this play was based), it was my absolute favorite play. Stage hand, costume fluffer, chair tester, or even... actor, I realized that participating in this play was an absolute necessity for my well-being.

Apparently I'm not the only one who holds the play in high regard. Professors Wildeman, Pettit, Foreman, and Hesselink were all surveyed and asked to each suggest several plays that they thought we should try to stage. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead was the only play that appeared on all four lists.

Maybe it was just the aggravating persistence of the ticket sellers, or maybe it was something else, but there seemed to be a general air of anticipation generated among the student body as well. That Friday night, the final performance, was one of, if not the largest crowds that Covenant Drama has ever witnessed. As one of the actors on stage that night, let me say it was thrilling.

The Sights & Sounds of Chattanooga

Everybody's been down the mountain for a good time right? I hope so. If you have, you may recognize some of the places. If you don't recognize them, then relax and become excited, for you are about to find out some slick things to do in Chattanooga.

First, I like to eat and so do you. You should go to Lupi's. The nuttiest, maddest, phattest pizza place in Chattanooga or the interior universe. Get a calzone. They are correct and large and better than good. Perhaps you'd like to have some coffee or exotic pastries. You should swing next door to Greyfriar's. From time to time you may want a lovely time for free. What you need to do is go for a moonlight stroll on the walking bridge. It does not actually walk, it thinks deeply about those who walk upon it. Be careful what you discuss whilst walking, it may hear you and repeat it. After crossing the walking bridge that doesn't walk, you could head to the Blue Angel and hear some live music and eat some food. Sometimes they have open mic night and you can embarass yourself off of campus. Speaking of good times and great oldies, I had the privilege of performing at the Kudzu Festival this year. It took place under the walking bridge. Look and listen for signs of this historic music event.

Looking for different excitement? Good, I will tell it to you. Do you like fish? Go to the Tennessee Aquarium located in downtown Chattanooga. Also for a sports good time (besides the Scots) you could go to a Mocs game. UTC is right in Chattanooga too and they play sports. Oh, you're hungry again. You must go to Durty Nellie's. It is completely phat and profesionally skilled. It is an Irish pub style place and it is all about having a good time. There are more things to do in Chattanooga, but these are highly favored. All in all Chattanooga is a lovely town and I hope to see you enjoying it.

Bonding in the Great Outdoors

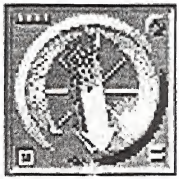
There was an active group of students outside this year. Some went hiking, some went biking, some went to the underworld of caves, and there were even a few that found their home on cliffs. Whoever could get together at any miscellaneous time, would take the afternoon to find a harder climb, maybe Kayak at Little River Canyon, or, even better, practicing Kayak rolls in Covenant's pool during the winter! It wasn't uncommon to get "stuck" out climbing and somehow failing to return for class.

Even though trips were usually spontaneous, last minute, and always with a slightly different group, all those involved became good friends. There is a stronger connection formed by hanging your life through someone else's hands, getting worn out together on a long ride, or going through that rapid upside down!



But the con- nection to God was fostered through relying on Him; trying to calm fears in prayer or even praying for the healing of the few minor inju- ries we had. Since God made the out- doors, all of us felt blessed to enjoy the cre- ation in such unique ways! Not many people get the experience of hanging off a big cliff, riding down a smooth rapid, or even flipping over the handlebars! And to experience nature with other people is really awesome. When everyone really wants to do something well, it is so inspirational!

Old timers like John Simpson, Tim McDowell, and Sam Glaser helped teach newcomers like Tim Rowe, John Drake, Jacob Claasen, Matt Mantooth, Jenny Erbel, Nicole Horton, Monique Good, Ginny Blair, Matt Marooney, Jeremy Toole, and others become familiar to their activity. Some were aiming to train hard, and they improved quickly. Others only wanted to get a taste and have fun. But there was a unique bond between the people that couldn't be explained. We all went to different worlds together, and the ones who had been there with me, always caught my eye when we were back in Covenant land. Seeing them created an instant memory to the times God had provided elsewhere.

Break on Impact

This year I had the awesome opportunity to spend my Spring Break on a Break on Impact trip to Northern Ireland. The team was made up of fourteen: Dot Hunter as our staff advisor, ten students from Covenant College, and three students from Mississippi State University. From day one we knew that this trip would be like no other missions trip any of us had ever been on. The team spent weeks preparing for the evangelism that we would be doing in Northern Ireland. We arrived in Northern Ireland Sunday morning and John Moxen and the rest of his staff from Project Evangelism did not blink an eye before they put us to work. As we witnessed throughout the week it became more and more apparent to me and others in the group that the trip name, Break on Impact, was very significant. First, one must be broken and humbled before the Lord to work with these men, women, and children. It was evident that it was Christ speaking through us as we shared the Gospel of Jesus Christ to those in a nearby army camp, the 35 or so Catholic children that showed up at a Protestant church to hear the Word of the Lord proclaimed, and those at a primary school in downtown Belfast.

This trip also impacted each of our lives greatly. I have never been on a trip in which you could see the eagerness of those wanting to know Christ so vivid in their eyes. Joey, one of our team members from MSU got the chance to share the Gospel with a little boy named Sean who could not stop shaking because he was so eager to pray to the Lord. God also proclaimed Himself by the beautiful surroundings of Northern Ireland. Each day that we were there we caught a glimpse of God's creativity. There are endless stories that any one of us can tell you about God's goodness and faithfulness to us on our Break on Impact trip to Northern Ireland. I praise Him for the opportunity to serve Him.

To the End of the World And Beyond

Several Covenant students and alumni took advantage of some dirt cheap airline companion tickets and traveled overseas for Spring Break. Leah Behm and I were two of those adventurous people. We had studied together in 1995 in the Czech Republic and directed our newest adventure back to Eastern Europe to visit our favorite old haunts. We spent a few days in Vienna, a few days in Prague, an afternoon in Olomouc, and many, many hours on public transportation (trains, buses, trams, etc.).

While in Europe, we noticed an amazing phenomena: Covenant students and Alumni seem to attract each other. For instance, in the enormous Schippol International Airport in Amsterdam, we ran into Gordy Martin and the Ireland Break on Impact team. We stayed with Covenant alumni in Vienna and in Prague. We also ate dinner in Vienna with other Covenant students too. The world is a relatively small place!

Leah and I had similar impressions of this trip. Having been to the same places together three years previously, we immediately went back to our common favorites and took each other to any sights the other missed on our first trip to Eastern Europe. These jaunts included Sacher Torte at the Hotel Sacher and Kunsthistoriches Museum in Vienna. In Prague we visited Hradcany Castle, Saint Vitas Cathedral (our favorite cathedral anywhere), and numerous strolls down the Charles Bridge. We also enjoyed a nostalgic lunch at Big Ben in Olomouc with our favorite foods, lots of chocolate, and took delight in finding that things were still unchanged. Prague was our favorite city in 1995 and it still is in 1998.

Spring Banquet
An Evening to Remember
Rock City Gardens

I could have danced all night. This years Spring Banquet took place at the Enchanted Rock City Gardens on April 17. Although many might remember this night for the rain that drizzled down upon us, I myself will remember it for dancing to the wonderful Band, in the Big wonderful rain. It was a one night! As everyone was arriving we got the chance to squeeze through various rock formations in order to get to the beautiful overlook where we would be spending our evening. The dancing lessons that had taken place the days before were quickly put to use. Afterwards everyone enjoyed squeezing in the covered spots for dinner. Then once again the dancing began. It truly was an enchanted evening filled with laughter as toes were stepped on, umbrellas were held why trying to dance, and professors and their wives showed us "how it was all done". It was truly an "Enchanted" evening at Rock City.

The Life and Times of Chapel

Covenant's student ministries are closely connected with Covenant's chapel program because ministry can be one constant way of responding to the challenges brought forth through examining God's word. Although Isaiah reminds us that all of our good works are but filthy rags, James tells believers that faith without works is dead. Thus, ministry in any form is a natural response of God's children to His works of love and mercy in their lives.

Both Covenant's chapel program and its academic curriculum provide opportunities to recognize God's gifts to his children. By sharing God's gifts of time, ears, and heart, among other gifts, participants in ministry in all forms demonstrate a natural response that must occur when we as servants are confronted with the reality of our sin and God's grace.

One Carter Council member said, "It was a labor of love, that was a lot of fun" concerning the planning and execution of the now popular and much anticipated annual relay race through Carter Hall. February 25th was the BIG day. Weeks of preparation went into this years Tour de Carter, but it was all worth it. Many students look forward to this time as an opportunity to show us how brave or silly they are. Carter Council put on Tour de Carter as an opportunity for the occupants of Carter Hall to show off their peculiar talents in a friendly, yet competitive atmosphere. Members from each hall had to participate in an array of wierd and wacky games from shooting an alkaseltzer tablet off the forehead of a friend, to breaking an egg placed on someone's head with a fish. Of course, Tour de Carter would not be the same without the bonus stunt. This year, brave volunteers had to eat dog food...yum-yum. The winners for this year's competition was Second Central, and in second and third place was a combination team from Ghetto and Fourth North, and Second South respectively.

Alice In Wonderland

Lights! Camera! Action! After four performances, beginning on April Fool's Day and ending with the Children's Literary Fair on April 4, the curtain drawn on one of the best productions that the Covenant College drama club had seen in a while. Alice (Nancy Young) is lost in a world of nonsense after she falls down the White Rabbit's (Thomas C. Andreas) hole. She finds herself in a garden of enchantment where she meets Tweedledee (Josh Moon) and Tweedledum (Dan Wykoff). Alice then leaves the scene because of her frustration and runs into the Caterpillar (Bill Higgins). She then eats a bit of the Caterpillar's mushroom and grows to a more normal height. From there, Alice follows the Chesire Cat (Caleb Monroe) to the Duchess' (Maria Bell) house. She tries to comfort the Duchess' infant (Doyle Allen) who is actually nothing more than a spoiled brat. She leaves the Duchess' house and finds the Chesire Cat waiting to speak to her. After a strange conversation with him, she proceeds to find the March Hare's (Marty Marquis) house. She stumbles upon the March Hare's tea party and is berated and abused by the Mad Hatter and the Dormouse (Frances James). Alice leaves only to find herself caught up in a web of deceit with the cards (Josh Moon, Dan Wycoff, Angelica Gritter). The tyrannous Queen of Hearts (Jessica Wallis) and her meek husband, the King of Hearts (Doyle Allen), discover this plot and the Queen calls for a beheading. The Queen calls for a croquet game and Alice had difficulty with her flamingo. Soon Alice is in the Court where she finds out that "all ways are the Queen's ways." Alice awakes to her sister's (Angelica Gritter) calls and wonders if it was only a dream.

Concerts, A Banquet, and More Concerts

This was a great semester for CAB. The Board tried its best to benefit the college with different activities as well as exciting concerts. We were able to bring Caedmon's Call here in February, even after the huge snowstorm caused them to postpone the concert for a week. Everyone seemed to enjoy the concert. The band was very enjoyable. Those that were able to help the band before and after the concert found that they were cordial offstage as well as on stage. The members were fun and talkative to all that approched them. Bebo Norman and Andrew Peterson were good openers and prepared the audience for the awesome performance that would follow. The Wes King, Phil Keaggy, and Scott Dente Trio Concert at Memorial Auditorium proved to be a great success. Covenant was able to open the opportunity for the city to enjoy some powerful Christian music. Spring Banquet was a smash as couples danced under the stars at Rock City's overlook in a wet, but beautiful atmosphere. The band allowed couples to fox trot, waltz, and even do the rumba. The dance lessons that were offered earlier in the week, proved to beneficial as students showed their stuff on the dance floor.

Senior Banquet

"In All Things, Christ Pre-eminent"

1998

A pause to think and look... There are families everywhere. There are introductions, hugs, and excited chatter as everyone has a seat at Senior Banquet. Each senior's emotions are like a see-saw...from the ecstatic relief of making it to this eventful day, to the nostalgic sadness of saying "good-bye" and ending another chapter in our lives. As we sit, we are served by the faculty and by other Covenant students, all of which we have grown to love and appreciate. As Dr. Foreman, David Yagoshi and Jenny Johnson come forward to speak, we are reminded of the depth of relationships that have developed in our years at Covenant and our academic maturity has grown since the day we stepped onto Covenant's campus. Our eyes are blurred as the slide show takes us back through our college years, giving us snapshots of memories that will not soon be forgotten.

In the course of the evening, each senior is given the chance to pause and to look back and then to look forward to the future that God has planned for each one of us. We are all reminded of our divine purpose as we leave this place- "In all things, Christ pre-eminent."

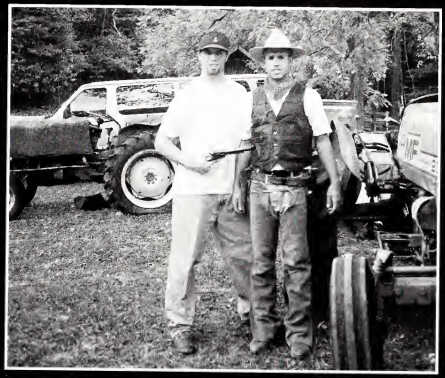
In His Hands

Halls



The question of what kind of flower Blackwatch would be raises some very deep metaphysical and theological questions. Questions such as... Do flowers exist or do we only have the image of a flower in our heads? And, are there truly different types of flowers or are those names just an attempt by the human mind to take control of nature?

Theologically, how can we compare ourselves with a flower when a flower is finite in its existence while we on the other hand are eternal, at least in spirit? Another question also raised by this topic is the issue discussed in Self in Society - Did Jesus come to earth to save man and thus bring about man's sanctification or did he want us to strive for the sanctification of the world as well?

With all of these musings in mind, the answer to the question is a Tiger-lily. This unique flower is symbolic of the brotherhood of Blackwatch. A "wise" philosopher, Greg Thompson, was the founder of the "Tiger." Through his mysterious ways, Greg referred to people as Tiger. This soon was picked up by other members of the hall as a reference to comrads. Eventually, Mr. Thompson was referred to only as Tiger, hence the beginning of the traditional naming of the Tiger. But now that Greg has moved on in life, we continue the quest of seeking after the Tiger. And that is why we are best exemplified by the Tiger-lily.

FOUNDERS

Once upon a time, a princess named Little Red Riding Hood had a very strange dream that she was sent by her fairy godmother to discover the seven essences of life. As she set out on her journey from Balconville, she passed a tall tower with a beautiful young girl in it. LRRH called out to her, "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair." At that, the girl obeyed. Suddenly, the tower transformed into a huge choclate bar. "Essence #1" was inscribed on the wrapper, so LRRH proceeded to drag the chocolate bar with her. As she entered a forest, she noticed a very bubbly curly haired girl picking up red Skittles from the ground. LRRH questioned the girl as to what she was doing, to which the curly haired girl replied, "I was lost in the woods, but these strawberry Skittles will lead me home." Then she took a package out of her pocket and gave it to LRRH before disappearing. Inside the package were a pair of new white socks! "The 2nd Essence!" cried LRRH.

Skipping along, she came to a giant beanstalk. Spying a little boy not too far away, she asksed him what the bean stalk was for. He inadvertantly transformed into a pumpkin. On it was a sign which read, "Open me-lots of surprises inside!!" Much to her delight, there was a can of spaghetti-o's and a glass of milk enveloped in bubble-wrap and taped together tightly! "Wow!" exlaimed LRRH, "four essences in one pumpkin!" Joyfully she continued on her way, humming a Bangles song and doing a few interpretive dances as she looked for the final essence. After a long hike she saw a shimmering something in the distance. The final essence! She ran toward the vision in slow motion with Chariots of Fire playing softly in the background. It was a hairbrush with the words "Sing into me" written on it. Feeling a great sense of accomplishment in her efforts and fulfilled search, LRRH gathered all of the essences in her arms, and sighed happily as she slowly drifted awake.

Catacombs

FOUNDERS

Long ago, in a land far away, there lived a famous ruler named King Green. He was a well loved king who led the small kingdom of Catacombs on great adventures. Although he only had twenty-one subjects, his kingdom was a mighty bastion of peace.

One day, Thomasina was reminiscing while on a date with one Cold Fish Walton. She remembered her childhood, after which she proceeded to put her lipstick all over her face. Cold Fish Walton was astonished and ran out with Thomasina, leaving their pea soup to cool.

The vagabonds of Catacombs were at their usual antics of vandalizing cement pads. Fortunately the strange reoccurring character appeared on the scene and frightened the young men off.

One day, while the twenty-one subjects were eating their pea soup, King Green was hit by a bucket of filth from above and became the evil Janitor. He was joined by his accomplice Nerd Boy. All of the subjects were afraid of the consequences to their small kingdom.

A strange reoccurring character said that the only way to end this curse was to face the Janitor in fierce body to body combat in a mystical place he called TWA. So, the team Boys and Ivy volunteered to fight the Janitor. The day came to fight. With the support of the local tribe of primitive rednecks, Boys and Ivy beat the Janitor, breaking the curse.

On Saint Andreas Day, all the people turned out in their best to celebrate the breaking of the evil curse. All was well with the Kingdom of Catacombs once again and everyone lived happily ever after.

Fifth North

CARTER

Once upon a time, in a land far away, there were twenty-five little princesses. Now, these were no ordinary princesses, nor was this an ordinary land. It was a magical candy land where Blow Pops, York Peppermint Patties, Butterfingers, and Circus peanuts covered the countryside. In fact, there was never worry of a shortage of snacks during the annual examination week because the land naturally developed its own products for the princess to enjoy.

The girls in this particular kingdom were dedicated to working out daily and the princes in surrounding kingdoms knew not to mess with them. In fact, it was for their own well being that they did not upset these valiant princesses. Some were known to have the skills of karate and all were cultured in the art of self defense.

One night some princes in a lower kingdom decided to attack the land of Fifth North. This poor army of princes were in for a surprise. They did not have a chance against the mighty princesses. The Fifth North princesses were not only stronger, but they had the blessing of the Candy Corn Buddha. After a fierce battle, the princes were forced to retreat in haste. They returned to their country with a new found respect and admiration for the women of Fifth North. Once again the warrior princesses were victorious.

To celebrate their victory, the princesses put on some Janet Jackson and En Vogue and had a huge dance party. And they all lived happily ever after in their magic kingdom.

Once upon a time, in the land of Camelot, there lived twenty-six princesses. These twenty-six princesses lived under one King, but held in their hands many different riches. First Belz

FOUNDERS

We are a hodgepodge of people. We don't have many traditions. In fact, in the past four years there has been only one tradition that seems to have characterized the "personality" of our hall. Somehow we attract some of the most unique individuals who really have nothing in common. Yet we always have good fellowship and great unity despite the diversity that exists between us. The seniors on this hall who have lived the duration of their college years on this hall, find exceeding joy and delight in this fact.

We seem to be thought of as a quiet hall, but if one were to spend even the slightest amount of time on our hall they would see that this is not the case. We are a studious hall, but we also balance our studies with many other activities. Some of these activities include: exploring the campus in all of its mystery, intramural sports (in which we are intramural champions in football, and have participated in all the other events), coming up with the winning skit for Founders Skit Night '97 (and the second place skit for '96), finding the ark in '96, and receiving third place in the homecoming parade in '97 (out of three entries).

As one can see First Belz is a unique, yet diverse group of men.

To the girls on Fourth Central:

God from the beginning of time and before has been a God of unity! I see small glimpses of his unity through the unity of the girls on Fourth Central. You are always there for me and for each other. You pray for, uphold, love, encourage, understand, have compassion for, accept, know, have joy with, are patient with, are kind to, are good to, show faithfulness to, and invite growth in me and each other.

TO GOD BE THE GLORY!

CARTER

The fog was so thick on the mountain that night,
From Carter the chapel was lost out of sight.
The voice on the phone was that of young Chris,
The love of fair Stephanie telleth her this
"Dear one, warn your hall mates; be ready for flight,
For the British attack the Scots tonight!"
So into the hallway did Stephanie run
And shouted the warning to everyone.
But all of Fourth South was asleep and was hushed
Save the maid in the towel singing "Where's my hairbrush?"
"Come Lisa!" said Steph, "we have no time to lose!
The red-coats are coming-I just got the news!"
"Fear not, friend," said Lisa, "I know what to do.
Climb up to the tower, take two lanterns with you.
I shall be ready to ride and spread the alarm
Through Carter and Belz and Schmidt and Rayburn."
So Stephanie Sligh, as fair as a flower,
Raced with her lanterns up into the tower.
Meanwhile, dear Lisa, yet stood with her steed,
And peered toward the tower, seeing two lights indeed!"
So into the fog she did gallop and cry
A warning to all that the British were nigh.
You know the rest. In the books you have read,
How the rest of Fourth South all jumped out of their beds
And mustered their forces to stop the attack
And defeated the British, but did Lisa come back?
Alas, it was somewhere 'tween Founders and Mills
The fog claimed her. They say she still wanders those hills.
And at midnight, oft times, you can still hear her cry
A warning to all that the British are nigh.

FOUNDERS

Once upon a time, not too long ago, in a small colony out in the woods, lived twenty-three young women. These women each had their own dreams that they were pursuing, but managed to enjoy the company of each other. They would gather with their brother colony (2nd Belz) to sing and roast marshmallows around a bonfire. Other mischievous tasks consisted of stealing pillows and freezing their cases to earn a medal and the initiation of their new sisters.

The colony had many unique qualities about them. One was Herman. You might be asking yourself, "What the heck is Herman?" Well, Herman is a bread that became an important part of the colony a year ago and it had somewhat been a unifying aspect for everyone. The bread is still being baked and the women became favorable to baking the bread (and eating it at gatherings), and it became a tradition to be passed on for generations.

One day, while walking through the colony, a furry little critter came through the door of one of the huts. Shocking all of us, he waddled into the room, sniffing and nibbling our stocking feet. His cuteness was overpowering, but he began to grow on us. His breed was ferret and we named him Herman. We placed him as our mascot because he also would be remembered by the colony and would be one of the many stories that would be passed on for generations.

The twenty-three young women glowed with the love of the Lord, and shared that with the other colonies in the Kingdom of Covenant. These women were affectionately known as the Women of the Colony, Gallery (or Gal Girls).

Ghetto

CARTER

Once upon a time, in a magical place called Carterland, there lived a group of folks in a little hamlet called Ghetto.

The members of this race were, in general, bald (with a few exceptions who were teased at birthday parties and other social occasions), male, and between the ages of 18 and 21. They were known to sometimes don wife-beaters and toot brass instruments for no readily apparent reason. Most were nocturnal creatures, who spoke longingly of "sleepy-town" when daylight came.

Rumors abound throughout Carterland concerning what went on in Ghetto when all the Carterlanders were asleep. Some said the Ghetto-dwellers swallowed swords and breathed fire. Others alleged that they bowled all night, (and that's why we have thunder). There were even stories whispered in dark corners of Sega "FIFA '97 SOCCER" tournaments 'til the wee hours...(can you imagine?!).

The Ghetto-dwellers spent four years going on exciting adventures, slaying dragons, attending soccer games, rescuing maidens in distress, playing frisbee golf, overtaking fortresses, storming castles, and reading many books along the way.

"And the peasants rejoiced."

The banana split is the ultimate dessert with all its varied flavors and textures. All of the different ingredients represent the unique personalities on Highlands. When making a banana split, of course you must include the quiet and gentle sweetness of vanilla ice cream, which brings to mind Sherry Eubank, Jo Chinchen, and Esther Alfonzo.

Next, you add the toppings. Stacy Cason, Julie Swanson, and Holly Eubank are tangy and spunky like strawberries. Hot fudge is comforting and warm, like Sarah Donaldson and Sarah Fleugge. Pineapple topping is sunshiney and makes you smile, like Katie Anderson, Allison Atkins, and Aarin Clark. Emma Keen and Jamie White are like caramel-genuinely sweet.

The most fun one has making a banana split is adding the extras. Megan McIlhenny, Nellie Vaughn, and Meg Hayes have multicolored personalities, like rainbow sprinkles. Nuts are flavorfully funny, like Lisa Ayres, Jenny Pruitt, and Katie Jordan. Tammy Luchenbill, Katy Morgan, and Jennifer Lefler are like cherries-bright and fun.

Finally, you can't forget the banana-Shauna deBoer-both for the funny yellow dress she wears and for her hilarious personality.

Jungle

FOUNDERS

Once upon a time there was a jungle maiden who lived in a small village with a pet mosquito. Everyone in the village ate oatmeal and were very happy. One night the dastardly cereal raider stole all of the villagers' oatmeal fields. The jungle maiden felt very sad. "I will go on a quest with my mosquito to find some more food," she said. That night, while she was sleeping, the jungle maiden had a vision of a celestial chilli pepper. When she awoke, she said to her mosquito, "I know what we need, but I can't remember what it is." By and by, they came upon an exotic Skyebird and a colorful Lizbird. They had dyed their feathers red. "Red!" exclaimed the jungle maiden. "The thing in my dream was red!" The two continued on in their quest and some time later they came across Lady Jenny who was watching "Veggie Tales." "A vegetable!" proclaimed the jungle maiden. "It was a red vegetable!" "Camille and Allison have some lovely pictures of colored vegetables," suggested Lady Jenny helpfully. So, the jungle maiden found her way to Camille and Allison's Coloring Wall of Fame. They directed her attention to an exquisite picture of a red chilli pepper. "We must find the Land of Chilli!" exclaimed the maiden. As it happened, the jungle maiden and her faithful sidekick came upon Lady Laurel reading poetry to a warm and fuzzy moose. "Do you know where we can find the Land of Chilli?" inquired the jungle maiden. Lady Laurel pointed them to the North and the jungle maiden resumed her quest with vigor. All of a sudden, the dastardly cereal raider leaped out from behind a vine and attacked the jungle maiden in order to steal her oatmeal rations. But lo and behold, Tesia, the red ninja dropped out of a tree and kickboxed the dastardly cereal raider mercilessly while kiko, the peasant cheerleader, cheered her on. After the jungle maiden had thanked Tesia profusely, Tesia escorted the cereal raider to Dr. Dawn for counseling. Having fully recovered, the jungle maiden and her flustered mosquito progressed toward the Land of Chilli. And so it came to pass that they met the illusive tribe of Mosquito Squashers (Laini, Mindy, Julie, and Michelle). Before the tribe could squash the jungle maiden's mosquito, he did some tricks to make them swoon with laughter, allowing them enough time for a hasty retreat. Next, the pair passed a burning cottage from which Sir Jake and just rescued Lady Angie. Firefighter Rachel successfully put it out. "Wow! I just put out a red hot one!" she said. Finally, the jungle maiden arrived at the Land of Chilli and made her way to the castle of Princess Lycia. Kim, the court musician, greeted her with a drum salute. The drawbridge to the castle was broken, so Lady Allison assisted the jungle maiden by spiking her over the moat. Lady Sarah gave the jungle maiden a big hug and a kiss on the cheek and escorted her to the washroom to freshen up for dinner. But Lady Sarah Knox was taking a very long shower, so the jungle maiden was late for dinner. When she made her entrance at the Great Hall, the jungle maiden was surprised to see everyone she had met along the way. She also met Princess Lycia who introduced her to Prince Penthouse. He said to the jungle maiden, "You are the best maiden in the whole kingdom because you are not flirty." The jungle maiden sarcastically replied, "You mom!" Then they all sat down to a delicious meal of oatmeal seasoned with chilli peppers. The jungle maiden thanked Princess Lycia and returned to her village with some new oatmeal fields. After she had left, Lady Elizabeth entered the Great Hall and announced cheerfully, "Rehearsal's over; did I miss anything?"

Penthouse

FOUNDERS

Fall of 1997 represented a new beginning for Penthouse. It is new in the fact that seventeen of the hall's twenty-two residents were either freshmen or transfer students. Of the remaining five, only three lived on Penthouse last year.

Penthouse RA, Justin Corder, is not only new to the hall, but is the youngest RA in Founders as well. This has not in any way prevented growth but has brought creativity and fun to the hall.

This year stands out as rebirth for Penthouse. Its members are building the hall from ground up, representing a conglomerate of personality types and interests. Penthouse is not a hall of similar individuals or a single interest clique, but rather a balanced group of diverse students united by their appreciation of individuals' differences.

And, as if that is not enough coolness for one hall, chicks really dig us too. During open dorms, you won't see Penthouse boys sitting in their rooms alone.

Call it an unexplainable phenomenon, a strange coincidence, or divine predestination, but somehow the most "money" twenty-two males at Covenant ended up together on the same hall, Penthouse.

The computer terminal is in pastel blue and pink, the colors carefully chosen to help soothe any anxiety that you may have about the trip. You step up and insert your boarding pass. You glance around, wondering why you decided to take the trip. You've heard great things about the River, but in fact, don't know much about it. You've certainly never met someone who's been there. "Thank you. You may board."

You pick up your bag and move to the first sleek gondola. Your guide greets you with a smile that's too cheery to be fake and seats you with the other passengers. "Everybody ready?" he asks. No one responds, but he remains unphased. "Okay. Welcome to your interductory tour of the River. As most of you know, the River is a transwater-it passes through a series of Gates, each of which is a portal to a different world. There is, of course, no way I can take you to see all two thousand of the River's shores, but the eighteen planets that we will tour have such rich socieities and such scenic beauty that you'll never have enough time to take it all in, anyway. Despite the mixing of culture, pleasure, and trade brought about by man's creation of the River, each of these worlds has managed to maintain its own unique traditions. Each planet is an island in space in and of itself, but because they each share the River, they are each connecteed to something much greater than the sum of its parts.

The soft thrum of the aqua engines below the deck of the gondola begin. You watch the shore as it is pushed away by the edge of the transwater, then you raise your hand, lean forward and say, "I have a question." The guide replies, "Hey, feel free to ask me anything. That's what I'm here for."

"I was just wondering what the name of this boat is."

Second Belz

FOUNDERS

In the forest of Lookout Mountain, Georgia, there is an ancient cave. All types of inhabitants existed there. But it was mostly a BAT cave. These Bats were known around the area for all types of deeds and things. When there was crime, the Bats were there. Perhaps robots were needed to patrol. These Bats were in control. And frequently there were security problems on the mountain, particularly the area surrounding the BAT CAVE. So the highly skilled Bats get together all their security equipment and scanned the area, made checks, recorded important data, and took readings. In addition to their duties, they also enjoyed what it was. They were known to have a good time. And a good time was had by those who were in existence around their brains. Ask and it shall be proven.

Exciting things happen when the Bats happened to share their ontological status with other humanoids, robots, robotoids, and other types of beings. They like to perform spontaneous raps at any given moment without warning. However, Reader, you must beware. These Bats are not just for a good time, they are an important service to the college. If you are familiar with the campus of Covenant College, you may understand what happens next. There are hidden Bats working secretly in the following departments: ARA, BEST, ELECTRIC SHOP, GROUNDS, FIRE DEPARTMENT, and COVENANT SCOTS: BASKETBALL.

It is exciting. Come by the BAT cave one time and you shall see all the skills represented on BAT CAVE 2ND BELZ.

Second Central

CARTER

We on Second Central have been asked, "What kind of Coke would you be?" Well, after discussing the term "coke" -supposing the question to be what sort of pop we were- the decision was that we didn't want to be a pop at all. Our hall prefers the Kool-Aid that Gerald and Brandon so generously provide from their five-gallon dispenser. Our taste is much more refined from the rest of Covenant's and maybe that is why no girls come on our hall. It doesn't matter and that is another story altogether. So we are Kool-Aid men and we drink all the flavors of the rainbow. From Grape to Kiwi and on down, the more flavors in the mix the better. So next time you ask us what "coke" we drink remember these two things:

1. We won't know what you mean by "coke" and besides "coke" limits you to one type of POP. Classic, Cherry, Caffeine Free, and Diet are all the types of Coke you can get and frankly that would get old fast. Please say pop, because you have all the variety in one little word.
2. We don't prefer pop we are Kool-Aid fanatics!

In closing remember to spare yourself the shame and don't ask us about pop. The question should not be, "What kind of pop would you be?" The question is, "How many glasses of Kool-Aid can you drink?"

Second South

CARTER

In the year of the Luthelites, eleven years post-war venturing there was a clan in the northern expanse known as the Retrac clan. It was a savage group of dirty men The Retrac clan would venture south into mid-sized towns like Turboken and Doerbek killing the cows and women alike, returning satisfied only by victory. They were a feared people. Then one day a young woman from the Retrac tribe dishonored them all. Diepazyap left secretively south on a cold winter night to meet with the people of Klockenburst This information she gave might have well been the living heart of the Retrac clan; for it had the movements of all its people and war plans, stuff that you just don't want your enemy getting. She returned with a heavy purse. When she returned she was hung for treason. The tribe was dishonored and distressed. They had been skewered from the inside...and it hurt...hurt like pain...the kind that really hurts...the tribe split into three sections because of different opinions. Three leaders quickly arose, greedily grabbing a position in authority, offering a bewildered people solace in a time of chaos. The first and most honorable of the leaders was Lupiot, a young farmer who's wife died several years ago. He was trying to assemble a group to go farther north and start over. He was the mark of hope in the tribe; always full of enthusiasm and a few heavy words. The second man was Kimlorbintotinastosemkindlyplease, the brother of Lupiot. He promised the people a time of victory and peace if they attacked their enemies to the south. No one liked spontaneous violence in the Retrac clan, so they hung Kimlorbintotinastosem-kindlyplease. The third leader was a beautiful cocker spaniel who offered his people protection, but they killed and ate the cocker spaniel. So, the people followed Lupiot's words and gathered their belongings and headed north. It was cold up north so the people made ice knives and ran down south quickly and killed all their enemies before their ice knives melted. The victorious Retrac clan has conquered their enemies. Ice is our friend...but, my sweet child, ice is also very cold. Cold like hearts of the now-violent Retrac clan. So, to this day, the Retrac clan eats only ice.

OFF CAMPUS

Once upon a time, there was a little town called Bluffsville. It was a very pleasant place to live and the people appreciated the fact that they could have their privacy and live independently. Some of the residents of Bluffsville, however, worried that no one knew about their beautiful town and as a result, no one could hear their opinion on issues.

As the years wnet by, the people of Bluffsville and the appoined officials became more frustrated at the fact that they were not included in the countywide carnivals and other festivals that took place during the year. They did not like feeling isolated and out of touch with the social events that took place. They decided they must do something, but what?

One day, a hero flew into the town and landed right in the middle of Bluffsville. The people made her feel very welcome, even though they wondered why she had come to their small town. They soon found out that she had come to help make the residents of Bluffsville more content. As time went by, the people started to notice several positive changes since "the Lady who could fly" came into town. With the help of the local officials, she started to unite Bluffsville with the surrounding towns. People from nearby villages started visiting Bluffsville and most important, the people of Bluffsville felt like they were more informed on what was going on - when people had suggestions on how to make the town a better place to live, she was always ready to listen and take action.

The people started referring to their hero as RD, because she was Really Dependable. Since the RD came to Bluffsville, there has been harmony in the town, and the people have full confidence that it will remain that way.

FOUNDERS

Once upon a time, there were a vast number of beautiful flowers found in the far corners of the earth. It was decided that the royal princess of Covenant College would find the rarest, most beautiful flower, and surround herself with its exquisite beauty. A royal pronouncement was made to present the fairest flower of the Kingdom before the princess. Brought to her were exotic orchids, whose rarity intimated a sense of mystery. There were dainty daisies, whose beauty was found in simple elegance. There were multi-colored roses that had in each petal a drop of romance. Daffodils, which exuded sunshine, and morning glories, that reflected the radiance of a brilliant sunset.

Each of these flowers were brought in separate vases to the princess. The princess looked at each rare flower and began to weep. Her Resident Director wrapped her arms around the princess and tried to comfort her by asking, "Whatever is the matter, my dear princess?" "Oh," cried she, "each flower is so beautiful and unique in itself, however will I pick my favorite?" No one seemed to be able to come up with a solution for the distress of the princess.

One day an old stranger passed through the land and heard of the princess' grief. He requested an audience with her and told her, "My dear, why not put all the flowers together in a bouquet and let them shine?" The princess was ecstatic about this idea and immediately ordered that this be done.

Individually, the flowers were stunning, but when placed together, there was never such a beautiful sight to be seen. People came from far and wide to see the exquisite breathtaking ensem the princess' flowers.

One day, the girls of Third North went for a walk in the woods. As they walked along the girls discovered a shiny yellow rock with the words "Magic Pebble" on it. Kristen smiled and wished she could think of a good prank. Danielle wished for a new tower in Carter. Meghan took the pebble and wished for her prince to come, for world peace, and for everyone in the world to have a Dalmation puppy. Jenn wished for a full scholarship. Laranda wished for the Lady Scots to get a high seed in the National Tournament. Charity wished that she could play the piano and meet George Strait. Nola took the pebble and thought, "I wish I could marry Bo Duke and drive the General Lee one time." Katie wished that Tom Cruise would show up at her door. Tracey wished for a golden stairway to heaven. While Corrie wished she could sing better, Krista wished for some more sour gummi worms. Kimberly took the pebble and simply thought, "May, 2001." Anne wished she were a bit taller. Kara wished for a 48-hour day and lifetime supply of mint chocolate-chip ice cream. Angie wished that all her freckles would disappear. Janine wished that God's will would be done on earth as it is in heaven. Joanna wished for a life full of love and plenty of cappuccino and sour jellybeans. Crystal wished for no more phone bills and two more pebbles. Elizabeth took the pebble and wished for a day spent in the country and a lifetime supply of TCBY yogurt. Melissa just wished for a normal pebble so that she wouldn't have to think up a wish. And Angelica smiled at all the girls and wished for the "glue" to hold all of these girls together. At the end of the hike, the girls climbed the stairs to Third North to get ready for another week. As for their wishes... Well, all that can be said is that God is in control and all the girls lived happily ever after.

Third South

CARTER

Once upon a time in the enchanted kingdom of Third South, in the land of Covenant, there lived 26 beautiful princesses. In order to earn the title of Lady in their kingdom, they adventurously dined at the International House of Crumpets at an hour when the rest of the land was tucked safe in their beds dreaming of slaying CHOW homework and dancing at the merry festival of Kilter.

For amusement, these young maidens loved to frolic at a game they affectionately deemed "take your aggressions out on fellow Covenantians," also known as intramural soccer. The princesses enjoyed their weekly Bible studies and hall meetings in which among other things they lamented over troubles with the knights of Covenant, taking comfort in Psalm 57:3. They also had the traditional Thursday night gathering, where they congregated to watch ER and discussed afterwards the correct handling of blood-born pathogens.

One of the tragedies in the lives of the princesses of Third South was that whenever they tried to plan outings with the manly knights who resided in nearby kingdoms, a rain cloud was always there to give them trials and tribulations. Good triumphed over evil though, because the princesses smiled and persevered in joy on their rainy Day of Prayer camping trip, their rainy hall feast, and their rainy evening of carving pumpkins.

The best thing about the lives of the Third South princesses was that they truly care for one another and loved to spend time together in good conversation and evenings filled with laughter. Although Lady Jenny liked to streak through the usually peaceful kingdom, and Ladies Cherith and Erin were known to display their undergarments on the announcement board, the rest of the princesses forgave their wavering mental health and did not throw them in the dungeon. And they all lived happily ever after.

The End.

An unknown world awaits me.
The Lord leads my soul away,
He says, "Forget your past,
Push forward to the goal,
And hand Me your fears each day."

"I am your stronghold in a day of trouble."
Well Lord, that day is now.
I am trapped by my fears,
As each day draws closer,
Please hold back my tears or tell me how.

Lord my faith in you is still strong,
And I have no doubt you're by my side,
I thank you for this chance,
To learn more than I've imagined,
So please don't let me hide.

Oh Lord how awesome you are!
You knew my fears before they came to be,
You are always close,
You put your arms around my soul,
And you say, "Child, give these fears to Me."

"My burden is easy," He said.
"And my yoke is light.
I carried the cross on my shoulder for you,
I am strong,
And will carry your fears tonight."

What can you say to Jesus
When He makes an offer like such?
You accept His strength,
Lest His love overwhelm you,
And say, "For me why do you care so much?"

"Have I not told you,
That my love for you is great?
I would die for you,
Go to hell for your sin,
So that my Father would open the gate."

"Enter through the narrow gate,
And join My Father at His throne,
There is already a place prepared for you,
Go in,
And you shall never be alone."

"So Lord these fears I have,
You offer to take them away?
You carried the cross,
Died and were treated with shame,
So that I would have a place to stay."

An unknown world awaits me,
But to my Savior it is His backyard,
He will show me around,
He will lead my heart,
And from me He will never go far.

The Sabbatical

The root meaning of the word "Sabbath" is to cease, or to desist. After six days of labor, God stopped his creation work, rested, and was refreshed. After six years of sowing, pruning, and gathering, the land was to lay fallow for one year. After six years of labor at Covenent College, faculty members are allowed, even encouraged, to rest from their ordinary academic labors and be refreshed through other pursuits and experiences. I was granted such a sabbatical during the spring semester of 1997. Here are some of my activities and their effects on me from my semester of refreshment.

The Sonship course of World Harvest Mission
~ a crumbling of my personal self-protective, self righteous kingdom, and the beginning of a pursuit to know what it means to live in the Gospel and the righteousness of Christ.

A couse with Dr. Larry Crabb offered through Reformed Theological Seminary
~ a challenge to learrn a whole new way of relating to people in pain, not as their professional problem solver, but as one who connects with wounded and disconnected souls.

A week at the L'Arche Community in Mobile, AL
~ an experience in loving and being loved apart from what you can "do;" an understanding of what it means to be a shepherd to broken people; a sense of how important the acknowledgment of brokenness is to the building of true community.

Two weeks at Mepkin Abbey near Charleston, SC
~ a challenge to see and experience worship as the primary thing in life; an understanding that worship is more than just cerebral, and more than a sermon; a challenge to move toward simplicity and order from the normal chaos of life.

Two weeks in Latvia to work with Christian teachers in their recently acquired freedom from Communism
~ the joy of teaching "grace" to those who have lived under oppressive law all their lives; the joy of feeding hungry minds and souls with the meaning of biblical truth for their teaching; the extending of my small, narrow-minded world; watching God direct me in a ministry where I had virtually no control over anything.

The revision of my book for teachers now entitled Teaching Redemptively
~ a renewed and expanded vision for what biblical truth should mean to those who teach, this time including a concern for what God's grace might mean to the way we educate.

I take all these refreshing things as God's loving gifts to me, and I pray for the power of Christ to pursue the visions which have developed because of them. I believe this was a sabbatical worthy of the name.

The Beauty Of God's World Inspires Creation

Psalm 90:17 says, "And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us, and establish the work of our hands for you; yes, establish the work of our hands." Because beauty comes from God, the creator of everything that is good, Christians ought to praise Him for the beauty in this world. Even though it is fallen in sin, this is the same world about which God declared, "It is good." A Christian artist can understand the marvelous nature of creation better than a non-Christian, and it is important that he show his worldview through his art, as a testimony of love for God.

One Covenant College art student, Chris Ammons, approaches art with the desire to glorify the Lord. But, he realizes that his work does not have to be "Christian art" about Biblical incidents or truths in order to please God. "All art, unless it is sacreligious, brings glory to God through the act of Creation," he believes. Creativity is one characteristic that comes from being made in God's image. Nature, like art, can praise God without telling stories or teaching doctrine; it simply displays the Lord's beauty and creativity.

There is no single "Christian art" style at this college. Erin Petrella paints figures in black and white oil paints, and I make prints and pencil drawings of musicians. Joshua Caleb Green's impressionist-surrealist style was influenced by European museums he visited while studying in the Czech Republic. Ty Williams and Brent Jackson are in charge of a relatively new pottery club. Raven Crown, from the photography class, took some of her favorite photographs in Europe last spring. Jill Mullins loves to photograph elderly people because she can see their life experience and wisdom in their faces. Covenant's artists certainly offer a diverse sampling of creativity and God-given talents!

Relational Youth Ministry; My Personal Story

As I thought about sharing my experience ministering to teenagers, African American teenagers living in one of the poorest housing projects in Chattanooga, a few memories of a time I could see measurable change in one of our boys' and girls' lives came into mind. Most of my thoughts, though, were filled with memories of heartbreak and feelings of helplessness. And then I thought, perhaps these are what I need to write about...

I do not intend to share a story though. I want to share the way in which God used my broken heart, my feelings of helplessness, and the teenagers who caused these to change my life.

As I came to know these teenagers, I came to know their vast needs. I was faced with children who had children of their own, violence, poverty... more than I can begin to describe. Even harder to accept than their needs, though, were the walls which seemed insurmountable, the rivers which seemed too wide to bridge. The more I saw the depth of their needs, the more I saw my lack of ability to meet their needs. I felt trapped by my culture and distanced by my lack of suffering. I became painfully aware... I had little to give. For a while, I was overwhelmed, drowning in my helplessness. And it was there, in the deep pool of my weakness, I came to understand the even deeper ocean of God's strength as I never had before.

I still experience heartbreak as I walk alongside of these teenagers I have come to love. I am learning not to feel helpless, though, because I am not the source of help. I am learning I do not possess the balm which will heal their wounded hearts, only the hands, which I offer to God, and He may choose to use to use to apply it.

Student Practicums; In Pursuit of Victor Charlie Williams, Over.

Around 7:00 a.m. I arrived at the Hamilton County Patrol Center in Red Bank for my first experience in a ride-along. I met with Chief Tommy Standifer as well as an officer Max Templeton who I would ride with for the next nine hours.

I began the day at The Hamilton County Court House where officer Templeton was needed for a court appearance. I was given permission to sit with the officers on the side bench during court. Officer Templeton had one of the most interesting violations. One defendant was written a violation for running a train red light earlier in December. While in court, the defendant claimed that he should not be responsible for the ticket. He asked the judge to call Queen Elizabeth and tell her that Prince Charles was having difficulty at court. He actually believed that he was royalty and that he wouldn't have to pay for the ticket or court fees. I recall myself, as well as the whole court room erupting into laughter.

After sitting in court for three hours, Officer Templeton and I rode back to Red Bank and Soddy Daisy where patrol began. We drove up and down Highway 27 in pursuit of speed violators for two hours. Our most exciting and only high speed pursuit was at the end of the two hours. Officer Templeton's radar gun clocked a Ford Probe going 81 mph in a 65 mph zone. Because we were heading in the opposite direction of the vehicle, Officer Templeton made a u-turn in the grass medium in order to pursue the violator. Before I knew it, our patrol car was cruising at 115mph. Within seconds, Officer Templeton caught up with the Probe and pulled it over. The woman driving the vehicle was cited with a ticket of excessive speed.

After lunch was over, we took into custody a woman with an expired license plate, and suspended license. Since the lady was taken into custody we had to impound the car and take inventory. While checking the vehicle the officer found marijuana paraphernalia that she said she was holding for her boyfriend. This day was a great opportunity for me to see all different aspects of what a patrol officer's duty requires of him. I am very thankful for this experience.

"Do what has to be done, When it has to be done, And as well as it can be done." Whether it be stressing the goal of a compiled team GPA of 3.0 or above, pressing on through the rigorous training sessions each week, or filing out onto New Scotland Yard or onto the opposition's unfamiliar surroundings to play the world's most loved game, the '97 Scots looked to this above phrase as a simple reminder towards team ambition.

With nine returning starters, the team pledged to accept nothing less from themselves than another TVAC championship followed by a trip to the Mid-South Region tournament. This feat had not occurred since the '94 season. Highlighted by two late strikes by Matt Cobb in a 2-2 tie against rival Berry College, a 3-1 comeback victory against Lee University, and a soccer fan stampede following a Jackson Alexander bending a 20-yard gamewinner in a 2-1 win against Tennessee Wesleyan, the Scots would end their 18 game regular season as the TVAC first seed. This allowed the team to play host for the conference tournament in which they would first defeat King College 2-0 in the semi-final. In the TVAC final, dealing with a sloppy playing surface due to rain and with the November mountain chill, the Scots would raise the trophy once again, 3-1 winners against Milligan College. The team would later bow out against two-time defending NAIA National Champion Lindsey Wilson College.

The Scots posted a 13-5-3 record on the year, and Brian Crossman was named TVAC Coach of the year. Josh Good, Ian Mattice, and Todd McMillan were voted onto the All-Conference First team, and Matt Cobb and Anthony Tucker were secon team selections. Ian Mattice was placed on the All-South Region team, and NAIA Scholar Athlete All-Americans were Josh Good, Matt Kimbrell, and Chris Moore. This year's team was powered by consistent defensive play, active senior leadership, and offensive output by Matt Cobb, Richard Brown, and Jackson Alexander.

Special thanks go out to Dave Fish for keeping our Yard the best playing surface we saw all season, Gurney for an excellent job in the Sports Medicine department, and to every Covenant Soccer fan - you help make each home match unforgetable.

Women's Soccer

The Lady Scots past soccer season was one of exciting new beginnings as a number of promising new freshmen joined the team. Along with the new beginnings, however, came the end of a four-year stint that will not soon be forgotten.

This year's graduating seniors represent the group of freshmen that joined Covenant's first year program in 1994. The women's program has come quite a long way since its humble beginnings as a club soccer team. And much thanks is due to those graduating seniors for this progress. The leadership and godly example set by seniors Kim Brock, Rachel Jiminez, Polly Johnson, Beth Owens, Jill Hancock, and Lisa Fish is one that will not be quickly or easily replaced.

The 1997 season was a successful one over all. Despite nagging injuries ranging from shin splints to a knee surgery for Maija Iverts. The team was able to finish the season considerably strong, with a record of eleven wins and six losses. For the graduating bunch, this season's record combined with the past three years' total equals an overall record of forty-three wins, twenty-three losses, and one tie. Within conference play, the seniors' record for four years was twenty-three wins and only four losses. As well, a number of players received conference and regional recognition. Rachel Jiminez, Lisa Fish, Kim Brock, and Jill Hancock all received All-Conference honors. Brock and Hancock were also awarded positions of the All-South team. In addition, Melissa Stanton was awarded Acedemic All-American honors.

As the seniors have stepped down and the underclassmen step up, there is an anticipation of a wealth of promising seasons to come. Those who started out with the program four years ago will be greatly missed both on and off the field, but trust that the wealth of talent and character evident in the lives and attitudes of the underclassmen will provide the leadership necessary to be successful in the coming years.

Men's Cross-Country

The Scots had a successful season despite being plagued with injuries throughout it. The upperclassmen provided tremendous leadership and encouragement to the underclassmen, while the underclassmen gained valuable experience that can benefit the Scots in years to come. Several runners helped carry the load and as the season progressed they developed a true spirit of oneness and came together as a team.

At the regional meet, all of the nine participating runners ran with courage and perseverance. Everyone, but the number one runner, finished with a personal best time and no one gave up until all of the Scots had crossed the finish line. With the loss of only two seniors, Phil Gelston and Jeremy Jones, the Scots have much to look forward to as the underclassmen continue to grow closer together and strive for the best.

Women's Cross-Country

The Lady Scots ran the race set before them with perseverance and grace as they grew together as a team and successfully represented Covenant on and off the trail. A good number of the Lady Scots were plagued with nagging, season long injuries that affected the entire team. Despite these injuries they continued to support and encourage each other throughout the season.

The Lady Scots are losing three seniors; Catherine Middendorf, Mary Miner, and Leah Behm. This will be a great loss for the Lady Scots, as all three provided tremendous leadership and encouragement during the season.

The Lady Scots have much to look forward to as the top two runners in the region meet will be back for another year.

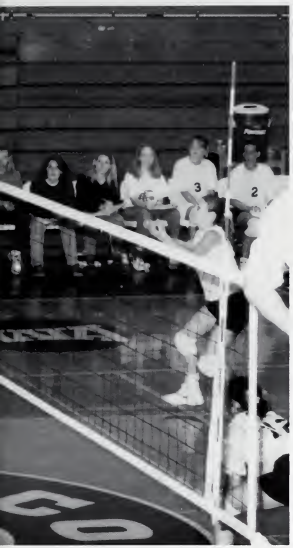
Women's Volleyball



Most times when you ask a player how their season was, you laugh when they say that it was a rebuilding year. But it really was for the women's varsity volleyball team. With only three returning players and seven total players, the Lady Scots were in for a rough season. Blessed with no injuries, the Lady Scots took on the TVAC with gusto. Under second year coach Kimberly Hays, the Lady Scots won the first women's volleyball tournament in almost twelve years. Playing at Judson College in Alabama, the Scots swept the tournament with four wins and no losses. Sophomore Missy Taylor, was named to the All-Tournament team, while Senior Captain Allison Fekete was named the Tournament Most Valuable Player.

It was a frustrating season, in spite of their hard work, for the Lady Scots. With only seven players, practices were tough and scrimmaging was even tougher. It was not uncommon to see some of the guys from around campus helping out at their practices. The Lady Scots would like to thank Dave Franklin, Andy Gast, and Josh Keck for their help throughout the season.

Although the Scots had some trouble putting everything together as a team, four players were honored individually in the conference. Allison Fekete was named to the All Tournament Team for the NAIA conference tournament, and she was second in the conference for assists and third in the conference for serving percentage. Junior Sarah Franklin was second in the conference for blocking and third in the conference for kills. Sophomore Jenny Davis was second in the conference for digs and Freshman Kimberly Johnson was fifth in the conference for blocks. Overall, the Lady Scots finished with a record of 16-11 overall, 3-9 in conference.

Junior Brian Court breaks the press... Using his speed and agility to bring the ball up the court, Court rarely had the ball stolen as a result of a press.

Stepping it up, Freshman Dave Dennison provided a good attitude and great play... Though only a Freshman, Dennison started the last half of the season and was a solid force all around for the Scots.

The air up there... Senior captain Matt Davis soars for yet another spectacular dunk. Davis was very consistent and never gave up despite a difficult season.

Men's Basketball

The Covenant Scots ended the '97-'98 season with an overall record of 9-15. Injuries to key players early in the season forced the Scots to adjust their style of play and constantly change their starting line-up late into the season. The Scots continued to play hard finishing third in the TVAC in team defense, and second in rebounding. Consistency at the free throw line placed the Scots in fifth in the NAIA and first in the TVAC in free throw percentage.

Junior point guard Brian Court was named to the first team all-conference as a result of his excellent play and leadership, and was also named an all-American scholar athlete with a 3.88 GPA. He was sixth in the TVAC in scoring (17.7ppg), third in free throw percentage (84%), sixth in three point field goal percentage (42%), eleventh in field goal percentage (47%), eleventh in average assists (3.0), and twelth in average steals (1.4)

Senior captain Matt Davis also had an excellent season, finishing fourth in the TVAC in rebounding (7.4), ninth in field goal percentage (58%).

Overall, the team struggled throughout the season due to injury, but they still played hard and did well under difficult circumstances. With the return of injured players Jake Walls and Mark Fields and three of this year's starters, the Scots are looking forward to a good season next year.

Sophomore Kristy Clark makes her move... In only her second year at Covenant, Clark led the NAIA in points per game at 26.

Freshman Joanna Hessenbruch blows by the defender... Hessenbruch utilized her great quickness to give others the opportunity to score, while remaining one of the top scorers for Covenant. She was named to the all-freshman TVAC team.

Women's Basketball

The Lady Scots finished the season with an impressive 18-8 record and a third place finish in the TVAC regular season. In the conference tournament Covenant defeated Bluefield, but lost in the second round to Tennessee Wesleyan by only one point.

Many of the Lady Scots were honored for their impressive season. Kristy Clark led the NAIA in individual scoring with 26 points per game and was named along with Charity Anderson to the TVAC all-conference team. Crystal Anderson, who finished eighteenth in the NAIA in rebounds, was named honorable mention for the TVAC all-conference team. Joanna Hessenbruch was also honored as she was named to the TVAC all-freshman team.

Many freshman stepped up this year with big contributions, and the Lady Scots will look to them even more next year as they seek to fill the vacancies left by Charity and Crystal Anderson. With no players sheduled to graduate after next season, there are high hopes for continued success in the years to come.

There are a million little kids running down a hill yelling and screaming happy things as they know that today is Saturday and that means their friends from Covenant have come to play with them. There will be games, songs, goofing around, crafts, and, most importantly, stories about their best friend, Jesus. Chattanooga Children's Ministry is a ministry to inner-city children that teaches them about Jesus through creativity, love, and Bible stories.

By exposing himself to a different kind of people, Ken Langley learned an important lesson about God's sovereign plan. "I have learned more about humanity this year. I learned that people are people and it doesn't matter where we are in life, God still has a plan for us. God puts people in certain places for a purpose. He will use you wherever you are, whether you are a college student or an inner-city child," he explained.

Good Friends... Laura Rodriguez and her young friend enjoy each other after they finish coloring on a Saturday afternoon. Rodriguez, along with the rest of the team that regularly went to the inner city, loved the positive feedback they received from the children.

College life this year was full of fun activities that allowed us to take a break from the stress and the books. The Senate did an excellent job this year giving the students at Covenant many opportunities to get involved and have fun.

The Sophomore Class Council joined with other class councils to plan different events like the trip to Six Flags with the Juniors and the 80's Night with the Freshmen. Homecoming this year was Burning At the Stage III, where the Sophomore leaders helped by creating root beer floats for all the listeners as they enjoyed the great music.

The Sophomore class did a service project each semester. They raked leaves for the widows in the fall, and in the spring they built houses for Habitat for Humanity. Overall the Sophomore Class Council had a wide variety of events that were enjoyed by the whole school.

Let's keep on working." This could have been a conversation that went on at the GLAD Tutoring each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon.

GLAD Tutoring was a program headed up by Beth Ann Rolleston through New City Fellowship. Esther Potoshnick and Jennifer McClain worked closely with her in order to get Covenant students involved. At the beginning of the year, there were just a faithful few that went down to help, but as the year went on more and more students began to tutor. While the main goal was to help kids with their schoolwork, many important bonds were made between the kids and their tutors. Friendships began and trust was formed.

Celebrating a Challenging Semester... After working so hard all semester, Esther Potoshnick and Shatara enjoy each other and some good food at the Christmas party. By tutoring, Potoshnick was able to help kids in school and in their spiritual walk.

Giggles and some mischief... It was pure fun as Jennifer McClain, Iesha, and Chantal laugh and tease each other at the Christmas party. Jennifer and Chantal did many fun things outside of the tutoring sessions, including eating meals together and spending the night at Covenant.

Driving up to a dilapidated house, you pray that tonight you will finally get through all the rough walls that your new friend has put up. While this young teenage girl has had a life of disappointment, anger, and hurt, you pray that through constant love, perseverance, and God's grace, your new friend will turn to the Father for love and consistent friendship. The members of the Urban Young Life team formed friendships with teenagers from the inner city so that these teenagers could see the love of God.

While it was tough working with these teenagers, it was a great opportunity to see more of how God works and join along side Him as He works in these kids' lives. "God continually taught us the meaning of unconditional love, as well as opening our eyes to the reality of the gift God has given us in brothers and sisters from another culture," Vanessa Baloche explained.

Get Off the Bus: Ready for a weekend of fun, Matt Novenson, Vanessa Baloche, and many kids from Urban Young Life, wondered what the weekend ahead of them held. It would be full of fun, crazy times, but hopefully there would be some amazing revelations made about Christ.

President Bill Clinton was the first Democratic president in 60 years to be elected to a second term. Under his presidency, the United States enjoyed the lowest rate of inflation since the early 1960's, and he was the first president in 17 years to submit a balanced budget to Congress.

But Clinton soon found himself on the defensive. It began when Democrats were put under investigation for running an illegal fund raising campaign in the 1996 presidential campaign. Then in January 1998, allegations were presented that Clinton coerced Monica Lewinsky to lie under oath about their relationship during the Paula Jones sexual harrassment case.

As Clinton's character was being challenged in the United States, the President was also dealing with the threat of war in Iraq.

United States Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright was the highest ranking woman in the history of the US government, and she was admired by respected diplomatic corps. The on-going troubles in the Middle East kept the 60-year-old diplomat busy from the day she was sworn-in to the top job at the State Department.

Yasser Arafat was chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization and president of the Palestinian National Authority who played an important role in the Middle East peace process.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu rejected the land-for-peace bargain with the Palestinians which led to dozens of deaths by terrorists throughout Israel. In the summer of 1997, two suicide bombings in Jerusalem, claimed by the militant Muslim group Hamas, drove Netanyahu to halt peace proceedings indefinitely.

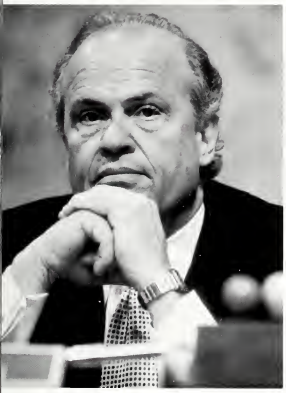
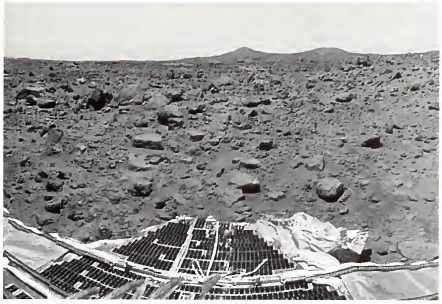
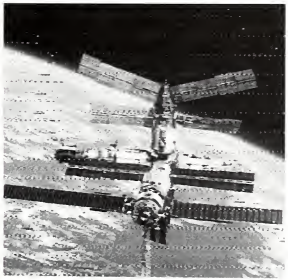
In the month of September 1997 two international figures' lives ended. On September 5, at the age of 87, Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Theresa died of heart failure. Mother Theresa was known through her work with the poor, the sick and the dying all around the world. She worked through the religious order of Roman Catholic nuns that she founded called the Missionaries of Charity.

Also in September, Diana, Princess of Wales, was killed in a car crash in Paris. The country had witnessed an astonishing outpouring of grief that was felt all around the world. More than a million bouquets of flowers were stacked outside the royal palaces.



The US Senate Governmental Affairs Committe, chaired by Sen. Fred Thompson, investigated alleged campaign fund raising abuses by Democrats in the 1996 presidential campaign.





Space exploration had its successes and its disappointments. The roving vehicle Sojourner, the first mobile explorer to land on another planet, landed on Mars in 1997 and gathered soil and rocks. The Sojourner left the Mars Pathfinder landing craft that transmitted a flood of information to scientists back on Earth.

The space station Mir was launched in 1986 and has been in orbit for nearly 12 years. The joint US-Russian missions have been plagued with continual problems, but the station is scheduled to be in orbit by the year 2002.

Jewel began writing songs when she was 17. Now, at 23, she's a star. Her first album, "Pieces of You," was released in 1995 and became an instant and prolonged hit, spending well over a year on the top charts. She was raised in Alaska where she began performing at the age of five. Her junior and senior year in high school were spent at the Interlochen Fine Arts Academy in Michigan. She then went to San Diego, which she now calls home. However, Jewel makes a point of maintaining a solid connection to her roots in Homer, Alaska--she carries a container of genuine Alaska dirt whereever she travels.

Letter from the President

This has been another year of significant change for Covenant College. It is in fact the first year that we have ever had two buildings going up at the same time. In addition to the construction, we added the largest number of faculty that we've ever added in a single year - five new faculty, not including Dr. Barker who returned to the classroom.

You have been a part of Covenant's growth and progress, and in the final analysis you are the most important part. The faculty, the facilities, the changes in the curriculum all reflect our commitment to trying to give the student the very best education we can possibly give.

There are some signs that a cultural shift is beginning to take place. There has actually been a national decrease in crime. Many of our leaders seem to be more concerned about the family, and there seems to be strong national support for the fight against drug abuse.

The overall strength of the economy masks our most serious problems, however, and I believe that students who try to live according to biblical worldview will be more challenged than ever. I think you will find that you will have many opportunities if you're willing to work hard, be full of integrity and seek to serve the needs of others. It is our prayer that you will have learned at Covenant the importance of careful analysis, good communication and strong relationships. We hope that you have learned to learn, because in a rapidly changing world this may be the single most important attribute you could possess other than your faith. Most importantly, I hope that you will have learned how to know and understand God's Word and apply it in a variety of situations. If so, you will have many opportunities to be salt and light in post-Christian America.

Thank you for your involvement as a student. I hope that you will not forget the college. It is important that you continue to support us as we grow and as we seek to serve future generations of students. We pray God's richest blessings upon you and we hope that you will come and visit often.

In Christ,

Frank A. Brock
President

Behold, happy is the man whom God corrects; Therefore do not despise the chastening of the Almighty. For He bruises, but He binds up; He wounds, but His hands make whole.

"Let us, then, not think that we are anything the better for our conviction of the truths of the great doctrines of the gospel, for which we contend..., unless we find the power of the truths abiding in our own hearts, and have a continual experience of their necessity and excellency in our standing before God and our communion with Him."

All for Jesus

College Hymn

All for Jesus!
All for Jesus!
All my being's ransomed power;
All my thoughts and words and doings;
all my days and all my hours.

Let my hands perform His bidding;
Let my feet run in His ways;
Let mine eyes see Jesus only;
Let my lips speak forth His praise.

Worldlings prize their gems of beauty,
Cling to gilded toys of dust;
Boast of wealth and fame and pleasure --
Only Jesus will I trust

Since Mine eyes were fixed on Jesus,
I've lost sight of all beside,
So enchained my spirit's vision,
Looking at the crucified.

Oh what wonder! How amazing!
Jesus, glorious King of kings,
Deigns to call me His beloved,
Lets me rest beneath His wings.

Amen.
